

You've got to use your electric hand

By Andy Dijon French (to the tune of I wanna hold your hand by The Beatles)

CC D CC D CC D D

G D
The field, formed round a current

Em B7
You'll want to understand

G D
And the way that you do this
Em B7

Is to use your hand

C D G Em
You've gotta use your electric hand

C D G
You've gotta use your hand

G D
Where's the South pole, of a coil?

Em B7
Tends to break your wrist

G D

Try a thumb, pointing northwards

Em B7

Current, extending from a fist!

C D G Em
You've gotta use your electric hand

C D G
You've gotta use your hand

Dm7 G C

What happens when magnetic field and current, aren't Am aligned

Dm7 G C

Use Fleming's left-hand gangsign and a force

C D C D C D

you'll find, you'll find, you'll find!

G D

The field, formed round a current

Em B7

You'll want to understand

G D

And the way that you do this

Em B7

Is to use your hand

C D G Em
You've gotta use your electric hand

C D G
You've gotta use your hand

Dm7 G C Am
Move a wire within a field and voltage you'll, induce

Dm7 G C
Use your right and not your left, else you'll

C D C D C D

Be confused, be confused, be confused!

G D

There are four, hands to know

Em B7

In Physics, applied

G D

But in maths, you don't need them

Em B7

Cross-products will describe

C D G Em

But I'd still use your electric hand

C D B7

I'd still use your hand

C D G Em

You've gotta use your electric hand

C D C G

You've gotta use your h----and
